Education

University of California Irvine

PhD, Philosophy, Department of Logic and Philosophy of Science 2018–2023

University of California Irvine

MA, Social Sciences, Center for Theoretical Behavioral Sciences 2018–2023

University of Houston

MA, Philosophy, 2016–2018

Rice University

BA, Mathematics, 2008–2013

Academic Employment

Emory University

Visiting Assistant Professor, Department of Data and Decision Sciences 2025–present

Taught DSCI 150 Introduction to Statistical Computing and DSCI 160 Programming Fundamentals for Data Science. The courses taught foundational programming and data science concepts, in R and Python respectively. Content included defining functions, loops, and conditional statements, basic object oriented programming, data wrangling and data visualization.

University of California Merced

Postdoctoral Scholar, Department of Cognitive and Information Sciences 2023–2025

Conducted research on social identity signaling, specifically when people have multiple complex identities. This included developing a formal model, writing code for simulating the model, and co-authoring a paper explaining the model and the outcomes it produces. Supported by NSF grant: BCS-2241823.
